

- RA David Connell m. Catherine Leaske, who was a close cousin through the Dennyys and possibly through the Connors, and they had two children
- RAA Mrs. Quill, thought to have d's.p.
- RAB Johanna O'Connell, thought to have d. unm.
Whether there were any sons we don't know, but we do know that David is a family name in a branch of O'Connells which we have not contacted. For instance there was a David Valentine O'Connell, an Army Surgeon, 2 Feb., 1884 to after 1904. There was also a Morgan David O'Connell, an Army Surgeon Captain, 4 Aug., 1878, who retired as a Lt.-Col. R.A.M.C., 15 Aug., 1902. To continue with the children of the O'Connell and Connor marriage :
- RB James Connell, probably a younger son, settled at Charleville.
- RC John Connell, probably a younger son, settled at Killmallock, and was probably the father or grandfather of that gay character, Morgan O'Connell, duelist and supporter of the Irish Party at Westminster in the 1830 period, nicknamed "Lord Killmallock," of whom there is a pleasant portrait at Maulagh.
- RD Dr. Rickard Connell, b. about 1750; d. 1833, sp. There is a portrait of him at Darrinane long thought to be that of Dr. Thomas O'Connell, father of Mary, the wife of the Liberator, but quite different from the miniature of Dr. Thomas O'Connell owned by the writer. He m. Jessie Douglas. Some of his papers are still preserved by Rickard O'Connell, Head of the Spa Branch, and from these we find that he was appointed a Surgeon's 1st mate on board H.M.S. Princess Royal (appt. signed by Vice-Admiral The Hon. John Byron, 21 Feb., 1779). Qualified at London Hospital, 1784, and made a Burgess of Tralee, 1788. For some reason now quite unknown to us he received a scroll as a freeman of Dundee. It has been the family tradition that he built Kent Lodge, though we know that, in 1821, Major Collis was living therein at the time of his (Collis's) murder. We find the following interesting note about him in the hand of Maria Alicia O'Connell, née Cronin, dated 17 Feb., 1860. "During the American war of Independence my husband's Uncle Rickard" (recte great uncle) "was surgeon on board Admiral Digby's flagship. There was a number of wounded on board and a great scarcity of vegetable—chiefly salt meat being the only diet. Things were so bad that the Admiral said to Dr. O'Connell that he would send a flag of truce to the enemy, but that he feared it would be in vain, because of the hostile feelings between the two countries. The Doctor then suggested that he himself should be sent as he had two cousins german who were Colonels in Washington's Army. So he set out with an escort and when the truce was sounded, he asked for the Colonels Herbert, his cousins. They came, and he told them what was wanted; they accordingly called on Washington, who kindly granted a supply of provisions; as he said 'Not as a boon to the English but as a personal favour to Col. Herbert and his brother, knowing Dr. O'Connell was a near relative.' They introduced him next day to Washington himself, and the Doctor returned to his ship with a plentiful supply of provisions and vegetables from a magnanimous enemy." This helpful clue to Rickard Charles' forebears defeats the writer; maybe one day we will discover. They were Herberts "of Rathkeale."
- RE Charles O'Connell, who was probably the third son in order of seniority. Our first clue to him was found in the Nash Collection of Press-cuttings, at the Society of Genealogists, London, vol. ii: "April 21, 1819: 'Died yesterday on the Mall, deservedly regretted by all who knew him, Charles O'Connell, Esq., a respectable apothecary of this town' (Tralee). 'He was a gentleman of meek, unassuming manners, an indulgent parent and a steady friend.'" He m. twice. (1) Catherine, dau. and executrix in 1797 of her father, Dr. Cornelius O'Connell, M.D., of Hillgrove, Cahirciveen. Exactly what Cornelius' origin is we don't know yet. We find his name as having signed the New Test Oath at Killarney, 7 Mar., 1776. We know that a Dr. Cornelius Connell, of Carhen, witnessed the will of one Garrett Morris, at Cahir, 4 Feb., 1773. We also know that he witnessed a deed on 22 Sept., 1781 (recently found at Lakeview) dealing with the lands of Comego, and it is more than merely possible that he may have been of the Comego or Dunquilla branch. However, we know also (Mem. 57.232.38200 in the Registry of Deeds, that as far back as 18 Mar., 1725, a Cornelius Connell, of Carhen, witnessed a deed. We know that Cornelius m. Elizabeth, dau. of Andrew MacCarthy, of Sugrena, by a dau. of the marriage of Myles (son of Kean) Mabony, of Castlequin, with Alice, sister of Donal Mor O'Connell, of Darrinane. Andrew MacCarthy was the son of Charles Carthy, to whom his father left, in 1751/52, "one crown." The father was Domhnal Buidhe MacCarthy, b. 1639; d. Feb., 1751 os., who m., 1723, as his fifth and surviving wife, Catherine O'Donoghue Dhuv, of Anwyss, who inherited all her husband's estates. For a history of this convivial centenarian see S. Trant MacCarthy's History of the MacCarthys.
By his first wife Cornelius, M.D., had two children, Catherine, who m. "Dr." Charles, and John O'Connell, of Cahirciveen, who m. (1) his first cousin, Frances de Courcy, of Strandsend, dau. of Honora MacCarthy, d.s.p.; (2) Agnes Spotswood, who had a dau., Kate O'Connell, b. 1851.
"Dr." Charles m. (2) Alicia, dau. of Charles Connell Fitz Philip, recited above (Q1E), and they had
